

The TEDC PAC (Political Action Committee) is the political arm of the Texas Economic Development Council, the state's professional association of economic developers.

Organized in 1997, the TEDC PAC represents the interests of more than 850 economic developers from across Texas.

The TEDC PAC is governed by a sub-committee of the TEDC's Legislative Committee with representation around the State of Texas.

With our network of economic development professionals from around the state, the TEDC PAC is making a difference. With your help, the TEDC PAC can be even more effective.

What we do

The TEDC PAC raises and distributes funds to political candidates and office holders who support a robust, competitive environment for economic development in the state.

The TEDC PAC is bipartisan. Contributions are made through a collaborative decision-making process with ample opportunities for input from our members and TEDC leadership. Interested TEDC PAC members may attend fundraisers and help deliver contributions to their local representatives.

How we do it

The TEDC PAC raises funds in two main ways. First, we ask for personal contributions from individual TEDC members. Second, we host fundraising events throughout the year. You must first be a member of the TEDC before you may become a member of the TEDC's PAC.

Why we do it

Politics is a contact sport--like it or not--and the TEDC PAC helps the economic development profession get in the game. Collaborating through the TEDC PAC gives economic developers a stronger voice before state decision makers on the issues that matter to our communities and our professional.

Why you should join the TEDC PAC

Joining the TEDC PAC is a sound investment in your profession--and your community. For a small annual contribution, you can join together with your colleagues to support political candidates that share your commitment to economic development. To be a member of the TEDC's PAC, you must be a member of the TEDC.

Being a TEDC PAC Member is a sound investment in your professional career and supports the TEDC's goal of strengthening economic development programs in Texas.
